

An eye for landscapes

Hone your amateur photographic skills with a unique retreat at South Australia's Arkaba Station. The Flinders Rangers hideaway has teamed up with acclaimed travel photographer Richard I'Anson and Camera Action Camera House to offer shutter bunnies the chance to capture one of Australia's most visually stunning landscapes over five days. Arkaba's topography is extraordinarily diverse and ranges from knife-edge ridge tops through cypress pine country to red gum-lined creek beds and I'Anson will help photographers capture Mother Nature at her best both in the field and in daily briefings. The four-night retreat includes nights at the traditional Aussie homestead and nights camping in the outback, as well as all meals, local transport and selected beverages. From AU$2,825 per person, twin share. www.arkabastation.com
